The King of Senegal Terribly Routed by the French.

His Entire Army Cut to Pieces in the Battle.

Native Allies Finished the Work the Invaders Began.

INV CAPLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION. 1 PARIS, May 20. —Details of the recent victory in Senegal have reached here. The hero of the occasion was Lieut. - Col.

Archinard, commander of the expeditionary forces in French Soudan. The Colonel captured the sacred city of Segou Sikoro, on the upper Niger, one of the capitals of King Ahmadou, on April 6, and immediately afterwards established it as a base of operations, at the same time taking advantage of a revolt of the natives against the King to secure allies.

Advancing from Segou, he marched towards Nioro, the second capital of Ahmadon, which lies almost directly north of the French Station of Bafoulabe in Upper Sene-while the wounded numbered seventy-two.

When the despatches left Senegal, it was reported that Col. Archinard intended to occupy Nioro, and later regain the French posts in Senegal on the route to Kouniakry.

but this method would be such in the highest sense.

It is the duty of the highest authority to prevent the adoption of a method which is cruel and unusual.

The action of a State Legislature is not at all binding upon this Court, and the fact that the New York Legislature has authorized this method does not lessen the right of this Court to protect a citizen of the United States.

Mr. Sherman also called attention to the feature of the New York law which gives the Warden of the jail wide discretion as to the time at which the death penalty may be inflicted, which was to in accord with the sentiments of the decisions by the Supreme Court.
Electricity, by which it is proposed to produce death, is as yet an unmeasured force.
In death by hanging the law of gravitation is well understood, and the effect of a way between Segou and Nioro.

Here his army, numbering 1.500 men, was attacked by Col. Archinard on April 25. The Colonel routed the King's forces and took possession of the village.

The fight was a bloody one and Ahmadou's army was utterly destroyed.

The despatches indicate that in the rout the King's forces were cut to pieces by the native allies of the Frênch, who showed no quarter to the fugitives.

The Fronch troops, who included four hundred white infantry and marines and some hundreds of Sengalese and Soudanese ailed sharpshooters, lost only fifteen killed, will the wounded numbered seventy-two.
